COURSE DESCRIPTIONS

MULTI MODAL

Life & Thought of C.S. Lewis, Dr. Steve West

C. S. Lewis has never been more frequently read or cited than he is today. He is widely recognized as one of the most influential Christian writers and thinkers of the last one hundred years. This course is designed to introduce students to Lewis's thinking and writing. Students will focus on reading and evaluating a selection of Lewis's most important works. Classes will be devoted to exploring and analyzing his thought, making it possible to appreciate more deeply all of his writings.

THS744-1 & 23 (Seminary); THE353-1 & 23 (Senior College Students)

Old Testament in the New Testament, Dr. Ian Vaillancourt

This course investigates the claims of the NT authors as they were reflecting on the OT message. We will investigate their methods of interpreting the OT within the context of early Judaism, the various uses they made of the OT, and the effect of their interpretations. The continuity of Scripture, scholarly viewpoints on the relationship between the testaments, principles for interpreting the NT, and implications for nurturing our faith will be discussed.

BOT795-1 & 23 (Seminary)

MODULES

Islam, Faith & Culture, Dr. Amal Gendi

This course seeks to introduce the major religious and cultural dimensions of the Islamic world, both those that express its diversity and those that express its continuity. No previous work is presupposed. Emphasis will be given to the development of classical Islamic institutions and ideas as well as the diverse forms of Islamic religious and cultural life. The course has three major purposes: (1) to provide students with a better and deeper understanding of the importance of the Islamic past upon the Islamic world today, (2) to reveal contemporary Muslims' own self-understanding of their system(s) of religious faith and practices, (3) to develop tools for dialogue and faith communication with Muslims. While it is not a history course, anyone taking it should come away with a basic grasp of the larger historical framework within which Islamic civilization has developed. Moreover, students will learn from Canadian Muslims themselves what it means to be a religious Muslim.

ICS615-1 & 23 (Seminary); ICS315-1 & 23 (Senior College Students)

Biblical Spirituality for a Spiritual World, Dr. Stephen Yuille

According to Alister McGrath, "spirituality is the outworking in real life of a person's religious faith" - what we do with what we believe. Clearly, if the framework by which we understand Christian spirituality is unbiblical, then our conclusions regarding Christian spirituality will be unbiblical. That said, the purpose of this course is to study the biblical foundations of Christian spirituality. In so doing, we will avail ourselves of our rich evangelical heritage (Patristic, Medieval, Reformed, & Puritan) to inform our pursuit and practice of biblical spirituality.

SPF512-1 & 23 (Seminary); REL401-1 & 23 (Senior College Students)

Life & Thought of Jonathan Edwards, Dr. Michael Azad A.G. Haykin

This course is a detailed study of certain aspects of the theology of Jonathan Edwards (1703–1758), who has been well described as "the greatest Christian theologian of the eighteenth century" (Miklós Vetö) and "America's Augustine." This course looks first at the contours of the life of Edwards, his marriage and his family. Then, his preaching and mentoring, his teaching on revival, conversion, and true spirituality, as well as the atonement and the Trinity, is considered. His inconsistent thinking regarding slavery is also examined in the course. Finally, something of his legacy in New England and England is discussed via the writings of his mentee Samuel Hopkins and the Edwardsean Baptist theologian Andrew Fuller.
